

Drive global understanding with quality translations

RWS Translation Services

As your business expands globally, it's important to connect with audiences in their native language.

Imperfect translations can have a negative effect on the credibility of your content and your brand. A consistent, quality message across all languages protects your brand reputation and delivers a great customer experience. How you approach translation can make all the difference.

Consistency, knowledge retention and value

RWS has a unique in-house translator staffing model that provides unparalleled control over quality. By using the same teams across projects and product lines, continuity and knowledge are retained and our linguists become experts in your brand, terminology and tone of voice.

A spectrum of translation options

RWS provides a wide spectrum of translation services to fit your needs.

Translation on demand

Access turnkey translations with our subscription-based self-service translation option. We offer flexible plans, from exclusive machine translation to human post-editing and review options.

Post-editing

Translate the content volumes your customers are demanding with machine translation post-editing. Certified linguists edit and revise pre-translated text to achieve human-level quality faster and cost-effectively

Translation

Professional human translation, contributing essential linguistic, cultural and subject matter proficiency.

Specialized translation

With expertise in the highly-regulated insurance, finance, medical device, pharmaceutical and legal industries, our linguists ensure all translations meet regulatory compliance and industry-specific quality requirements.

Transcreation

Create a recognizable global voice that resonates with your audiences in every language. Our transcreation experts adapt your brand communications both culturally and linguistically to suit the market – not just the language.

Why RWS Translation Services?

Quality that resonates in every language

For global audiences to understand your content, you need to localize it. But translation is more than converting text into another language. Professional translation contributes essential linguistic, cultural and subject matter knowledge that results in a finished product that seems like it was created specifically for each market.

Native experts

RWS is the only language service provider (LSP) to employ over 1,800 in-house linguists. All are native speakers who live in-country and work from the top 30 global translation markets. We augment our in-house translator pool with pre-qualified freelance translators across the globe for scalability and to provide additional subject matter expertise.

A smart centralized approach

Like choosing the right translators, the right process also matters. Our centralized and standardized approach ensures your translations follow a repeatable ISO-certified process so your content remains consistent across all languages.

Greater efficiency

RWS translation productivity tools are the industry's most popular. All of our translators are proficient at using them for greater accuracy and efficiency when sharing translation memories and terminology or post-editing machine translated output.

Better process for better quality

RWS adheres to the highest quality standards and all translations are reviewed for accuracy and flow. Every language is assigned a lead translator who oversees and trains all other linguists to ensure the quality of your translations. This minimizes project workflow risks, reduces translation time and improves consistency across your projects and products.
